

trumpetboy04

Charter Member

7 posts

32. "RE: PCEP "

In response to message #29

As a senior of the 2003 Plymouth Canton Educational park Marching Band i wish to share with u my true feelings of this past weekends events. Since my freshmen year i have been in finales every year except this year. And when we were first told we didn't make finales i admit it, it was hard and most of us were in tears. I know i was for sure. And then when we came to watch the finales performances by the other bands, that was even harder. it was hard for me to sit still and watch all those other great bands, while all I wanted was to be down there with them and compete with the best. but it didn't hit me until then, that being the best doesn't necessarily mean being in the top ten in the counrty, being the best is different to everybody. What we did at semi finales was the best we could. with all the excuses coming up this year(3 directors in 4 years, drill problems, ect... yadda yadda). We put on the best show that was possible and according to most that was a pretty good show. so i guess what i am saying is that i was sad we didn't make finales, but we put on our best show we could have and outta of all the shows i have marched this was my favorite. Now the saddest part i have to deal with is not marhcing next year. Because Mr. Whitlock brought more then just great music and visual coordination. He brought back the spirit of plymouth. And i am sure that sooner or later plymouth will be up there. And the qoute " the mighty have fallen" will be proven wrong. We have not fallen. We have just had a few obsitcals in our way. But can you bet that even though i wont be marching with plymouth any longer. I will be in the stands watching plymouth do what we were taught to from day one. Which is perform a GREAT show to its full potential.

I also wanna say congradulations to all the bands at finales. You were all great. you all deserved to be there. And i am glad i had the privilage of wathing all of your shows. Again great job.

now excuse me for any typing error's (it has been a long weekend and i am extermly tired)